Gay ally may also mean defending that gay people should have the right to be gay, regardless of your personal decision not to engage in homosexuality. In my personal opinion homosexuality should be legal and homosexuals should not be discriminated against, however they also should not receive special treatment; it should be okay to not be friends with someone simply because they are gay. I am against pride parades, the special treatment of homosexuals and the glorification of sexuality in our society. It may be against my private views, but I place no judgements on adults for whatever sex they decide to have and believe our society should treat them accordingly.

So to answer your question, "gay ally" is a vague term that I wouldn't identify with and I think pride propaganda is harmful to all people (including gays), however I do believe in the right of any sexual orientation amongst consenting adults. Therefore, if you want to stick your dick up another mans ass, im not going to stop you, but please leave me out of it.
