When it comes to helping people out it is important to take into consideration what may help them and what is absolutely useless to them. But if he is a beggar and I give him food and he tells me he doesn't want turkey he wants cheese then that is just being greedy. In arabic there is a saying in arabic "shahhad w msharat" which means beggar and demander. It is your job as someone trying to help or give to assess a situation and try to be helpful and it is the beggar's job to be grateful and either accept or decline the offer but never complain.
